

How to Remove the Backup Battery for Clock

Refer to the following steps 1–13 for how to remove the backup battery for clock.

1 Turn off the breaker operation handle on the controller.

- (1) Be sure to wear safety goggles, helmet and safety shoes during this work.
- (2) Turn off the breaker operation handle of the controller and wait for at least one minute after the pilot light goes off before starting work. (There are high-voltage units and large amount of capacitors inside the controller; it is dangerous to touch them while they are still charged, which may result in electric shock.)
- (3) Turn off the power supplied to peripheral devices (equipment) of the robot.

2 Disconnect the power supply connector.

3 Disconnect the heat exchanger connector.

-
- 4 Remove the eight screws holding the front cover.

-
- 5 Remove the front cover.

-
- 6 Remove the IPC.
Remove the USB license dongle if it is attached.

-
- 7 Remove one Torx screw for ground wire attachment
and disconnect the ground wire.

-
- 8 Disconnect the power supply connector, two EtherNet cables (Blue), the pendant connector, and the USB connector.

-
- 9 Remove two IPC attachment screws.

-
- 10 Remove the IPC.

-
- 11 Remove the two Torx screws for IPC cover attachment.

---

12 Remove the IPC cover.

---

13 Remove old CR2032 button battery.

